Points From Pekin. [Mr. Jas. Brooks' Pekin Letter in N. Y. Ex.] How human beings live by the hundred thousands in such a city as this is only to be accounted for by their insensibility to sights and smells; but they don't see, and they don't smell. Eyes and noses in China are, indeed, often as great curses as they are generally big blessings. I should like to dispense with a nose till I get back to America, or into Europe | ficacious and harmless preparations ever offered if I could then buy it back again! No sewers, no closets, no drains! No way of letting out of a big city the filth in it! Streets uncleaned for two centuries, save by the hogs and vultures! The poor are unclad and unwashed, with skins the water seems never to have penetrated; and eyes that are sore --but why pain you to describe ? Imagine the worst of everything. in that way, and that worst is all here.— Nevertheless, people do live here, and some live magnificently. There are some wealthy Chinese. There are many wealthy mandarins. The interior of some of their hopeless exteriorlooking dwellings abound in a certain species of luxuries, and in a very few comforts. What Pekin is, therefore, one cannot see in the streets; and as a foreigner can only with great difficulty get into a Chinese house, no stranger is likely to see more than these streets. There are sumptuary laws in Pekin that forbid luxurious indulgence. No mandarin ever can ride in a sedan chair, no matter how many buttons he has won, what their color is, or fans he carries, but by spe-cial permission of the Emperor. The sedan chair is the Emperor's prerogative. Foreigners attached to legations use it as representative of home majesty, and the "insolence" is tolerated from necessity; but no Chinaman ventures upon anything beyond a cart, save on two great days of life, or death-the first a marriage procession, and the second a funeral. Luxuries are allowed then. The woman, then, the only day of her life, rides in a sort of sedan. Hence, now I understand the commotion made on the night of my entering the city in an open sedan, and a lady in it. These sumptuary laws I speak of pervade, I am told, all Pekin life, and are here especially kept up to keep the people as far as possible removed from the luxuries of the Emperor. They do not exist elsewhere in China, only in this court city, where the Emperor is. The mandarin has his especial sable robe or ermine adornments in winter. As for the women, they seem to be of no account here, save as mothers of children. The Chinaman takes as many wives here as he can support-the Emperor has them by the hundred-but the first wife is the real wife, the only mistress of the · establishment, and the others are only her handmaids about the establishment, and they all obey her. The Abraham, Isaac and Jacob mode of life is the life in China yet. They have not advanced, in this respect, a step beyond the Patriarchs. What a field this would be for Mrs. Cady Stanton and the other bright strong-minded ladies, who in America are for reforming the world-for woman is not of the least account here, save to be pretty and well painted with white powder and vermilion, hair long, skewered, and well glued, so that the gale of wind cannot disturb it-the whole standing upon two little props, looking like birds' claws done up in sandals, and here called "feet." Alas! women-fashions are equally foolish every where! I bet in Japan, once, the woman's hair was her own, and was beaten in the bet. I would not bet on anything about weman in China now, from her head to her foot-clawsfrom her long nails to the color of her face. Copper I should have called her color, but I see so many powdered and vermilion faces, that I am not certain, now, the woman race is not white with red cheeks, or cheeks a little reddened. Above the brows is often painted red, with the eyelids, too.

PEANUTS. -- The new crop of peanuts is just beginning to come in and our shippers take lots as fast as they arrive. The quality is represented? to be very fine, only a small portion being immature or pops. The yield is said to be very good, with the exception of a few spots about the country where the rain was not so frequent during the Summer. Peanuts are getting to be a staple product with us, and the proceeds from the sale of them amount to a Tho best descriptions of COAL always on considerable sum in a season. Last year the amount of money arising from the shipment of peanuts was estimated to be about one hundred thousand dollars. As the crop this year is represented to be better in quality and larger in yield, it is supposed that the amount will be larger this season than ever. - Petersburg Progress.
